

THE COPYRIGHT HUB

The Copyright Hub makes copyright work better on the Internet and restores value to the creator.

Find an article, a photo or a video, we aim to make sure that it's only a couple of clicks to find out how you can reuse it.

When the creator gets better value, the consumer gets better content.

We have a licence to publish it on our website, but if one of our readers wants to use the image, they will know exactly where to go to get it, just by clicking on the eCopyright symbol.

As a creator, you can encourage your clients to incorporate this into their sites to make a statement about the value of copyright and to point other potential users to you.

As a consumer of images, adding this to your site is a powerful statement that you are doing the right thing and care about the rights of content creators.

To add this tool to your site you only need to add the following two lines of code inside the <head> tags of your web pages.

The link behind the eCopyright symbol puts back the link between the creator and the works they create.

It can be understood by machines as well as by humans.

It underpins a connected network where information flows freely to benefit creators and consumers.
